TENNESSEE STATE PARKS DAVY CROCKETT BIRTHPLACE STATE PARK

Davy Crockett Birthplace State Park

is located at the confluence of the Nolichucky River and Limestone Creek in Greene County, Tennessee. This 105-acre park is dedicated to the memory of one of our state and nations most famous individuals. There is a museum dedicated to Crockett and a replica cabin of the type David Crockett would have lived in during the late eighteenth century and a monument to Crockett containing stones donated from each of the United States. Though small, the park provides a wonderful diversity of natural settings ranging from forested limestone bluffs to meadows and tree lined streams; all providing exceptional bird and other wildlife viewing opportunities.

Historical significance

Born in 1786, David Crockett epitomizes the strength and character vital to our nations westward expansion during the pioneer era. With virtually no formal education, he rose from the depths of poverty to national fame and a seat in the United States Congress. His fame and popularity during his life was celebrated in books and plays. His death at the Alamo in 1836 marked the beginning of his legend. Davy Crockett Birthplace State Park is dedicated to the memory of this exceptional figure in our nation's history.
